In 1944, at the height of activity, up to half a million were based there with the United States Army Air Forces (USAAF). Their job was to man and maintain the vast fleets of aircraft needed to attack German cities and industry.At the beginning of the Second World War, there were two Prisoner of War camps in Britain. By the time the War ended, there were over 600. This book explores the role of the camps, their prisoners and workers, together with their impact on the local community.That's what occurred between 1939 and 1948, when thousands of Germans, Ukrainians and others became Britain's prisoners of war, according to a new book. - Prisoner Of War Camps In Britain During The Second World War
